nearmap signs licence agreement for Google Maps

nearmap Ltd (ASX: NEA) has announced a new commercial licence agreement for Google Maps that aligns with nearmap's goal to work with best-of-breed international partners as part of the company's continued growth strategy.

Key benefits of the agreement include:

- Enhanced and easy-to-use map browser user interface;
- National satellite imagery so customers can use nearmap outside of the company's current high-resolution coverage area;
- Highly accurate street maps combined with integrated street view;
- World-class address and location search;
- Property boundaries;
- Significantly enhanced and upgraded measurement tools and capabilities.

Commenting on today's announcement, nearmap Managing Director Simon Crowther said "This new relationship is part of a continuing strategy to align nearmap with world-class partners such as Amazon Web Services and Google.

"nearmap's focus will be to continue to innovate and offer our customers the most compelling and up-to-date maps and tools available to help them increase productivity, minimise the need to visit a location and save time and money."
