

ASX/Media Release

21 August 2015

Monash IVF Group (ASX: MVF) has today been the subject of a media article which contains assertions and inferences which require correction.

The media article infers that correspondence from a number of Monash IVF Group doctors received by Chairman Mr Richard Davis suggests they are concerned about patient care. This is incorrect. The correspondence referred to expressed concern in relation to the resignation of two senior embryologists.

In seeking to raise pregnancy success rates across Monash IVF Group to the world leading levels achieved in some of our clinics, we are always seeking to improve our science and service to our patients which sometimes involves personnel changes.

Patient care and the commitment to scientific excellence has, and will always remain, Monash IVF Group's highest priority.

Monash IVF doctors are a core part of the Group and the Group's Board and management work closely with them on opportunities and challenges that arise. It is not unusual for the doctors to communicate collectively with the senior management team and the Board.

Importantly, the doctors remain committed to the Monash IVF Group and remain focussed on pursuing the best outcomes for patients.
