Johns Lyng CEO Scott Didier said partnering with Zip and Zoono would help Strata Managers and owners keep their properties safe.

"It's a challenging time in that there is a real desire to ensure properties are safe and clean, but people are also under some severe financial pressure.

"In light of that our partnership with Zip is designed to allow Strata Managers and owners to access this cutting-edge product without paying in full up front. We see it as a win-win situation."

Johns Lyng's restoration and remediation business RestorX uses Zoono as part of the deep hygiene and decontamination protocol, used on domestic and commercial buildings and educational and healthcare facilities.
