BUSINESS MODEL

BUSINESS MODEL

MOVING TO FULL SUBSCRIPTION

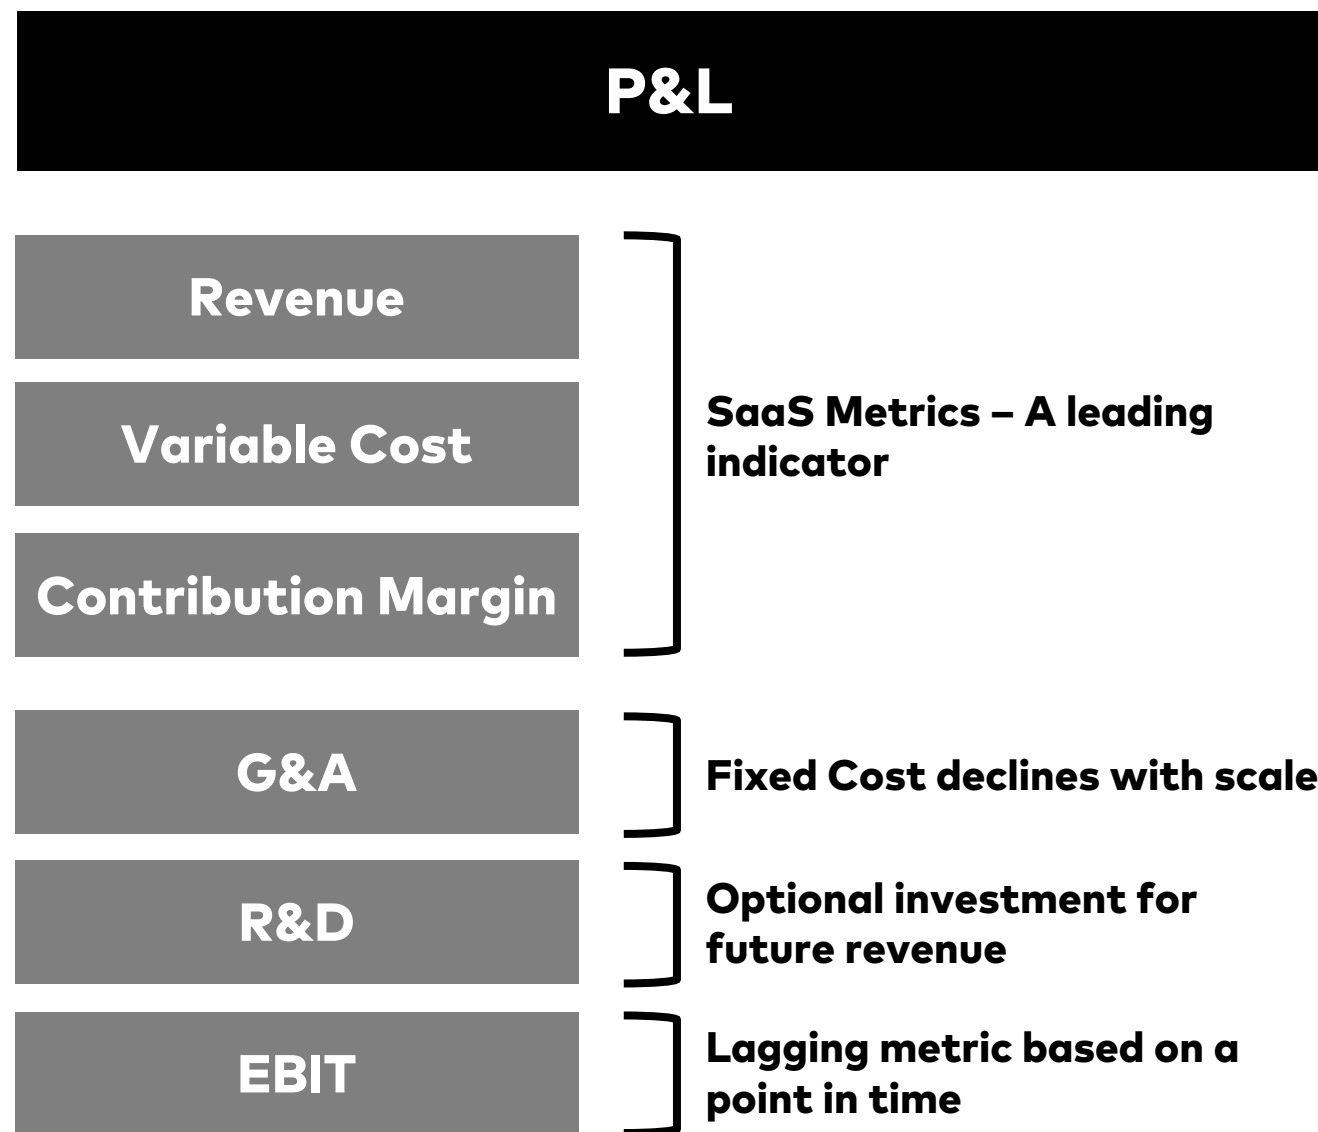

Subscription Revenue
% of Total Revenue

- In FY19 we began to move our business model to subscription sales
- Completely discontinued capital sales for Performance & Health from January 2021
- Very limited number of capital deals will remain
 - Stadium installations, sale of one-off accessory items, etc.
- Financial impact to last through FY24 with significant negative impact to recognized revenue expected in FY22 and FY23 as we transition
 - Capital revenues were mostly recognized at the start of the deal
 - New subscription revenues are recognized over the life of the contract
 - Full sales and marketing costs incurred and remain recorded up front
- Some hardware component of Tactics & Coaching deals will remain as capital sales
- Goal: 95% of total revenues via subscription

SAAS BUSINESS MODEL: MARGINS AT SCALE

Our long-term ambitions are:

1. To grow our ACV with gross margins at 90%+
2. To narrow our variable costs from c.30% to <25% as scale and cross-sell efficiencies are generated
 - Drive contribution margins to 60%+
3. To maintain a fixed cost base that supports the growth opportunities available to Catapult
 - Short-term: investment required
 - Long-term: c.80% of contribution margin to flow through to EBITDA
4. To invest in R&D
 - As guided by Rule of 40 (i.e., best mix of growth and margins)
 - Subject to practical limitations: <20% of ACV
 - Generate trust and confidence to invest
 - Be prepared to reduce R&D if circumstances require
5. In order to generate strong long-term free cash flow

BUSINESS MODEL

SAAS BUSINESS MODEL: MARGINS AT SCALE

Key inflection points:

1. Contribution margin outpaces the cost of run (G&A). EBITDA turns positive and continues to expand with ACV growth
2. Contribution margin outpaces cost of run (G&A) and cost of growth (R&D). Organic growth becomes self-funding
