Further information concerning PhotonAssay™ contract with OceanaGold Corporation and relationship with global laboratory SGS

Further to its ASX Announcement on November 25th 2024, Chrysos Corporation Limited (ASX:C79) (“Chrysos” or the “Company”) provides the following information.

As announced on 25 November 2024, Chrysos has signed a new customer contract under its standard terms and conditions with OceanaGold Corporation (TSX:OGC) to lease a PhotonAssay™ unit at OceanaGold’s Macraes Operation in New Zealand for three years with a potential two year extension. The Macraes Operation on New Zealand’s South Island is the country’s largest active gold producing mine, having produced over five million ounces of gold since 1990.

Expected to be installed in the second half of FY25 and representing Chrysos’ first deployment in New Zealand, the Macraes unit will be operated by existing Chrysos customer SGS; representing the first PhotonAssay™ unit to be leased by a miner and operated onsite by a laboratory. Chrysos views this working model to be of significance to its business as it affords the Company operational flexibility in how it approaches the market and executes its global expansion plans.

Similarly, the OceanaGold contract grows PhotonAssay’s footprint in the Asia-Pacific region and broadens Chrysos’ relationship with one of the world’s leading laboratory companies in SGS. Once deployed, the Macraes unit will be the second PhotonAssay™ unit outside of Australia, and the fourth unit overall, to be operated by that company.
